

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A groove is formed in a semiconductor laminate portion containing a light-emitting layer so that the groove starts from a light emission observation surface of the semiconductor laminate portion to reach at least the light-emitting layer. In such a manner, light is released from an opening portion of the groove.